CAY TRE'S SPECIALTY

Phở was originally a simple beef and rice noodle soup that originated in northern Vietnam nearly a hundred years ago. Some speculate that it evolved from the 'pot au feu' introduced to Vietnam by French colonists. After the country was partitioned, phở in South Vietnam became a more elaborate dish, often served with many varieties of beef, and a side plate of herbs.

HAVE IT YOUR WAY!

Each serving of phở comes with a side plate of beansprouts, lemon and herbs. Add the herbs and lemons to the bowl of phở, to suit your taste. On your table there are two bottles: hot chilli and hoisin. In North Vietnam they only use hot chilli sauce, but in the South people add hoisin as well. Our phở combines the deep sweetness from the marrow bone of the North version, with the fragrant star anise, cardamom and cinnamon of the South.
